

A vital part of every college student’s expense, aside from tuition, housing and transportation, is the purchasing of course textbooks each and every semester of a student’s academic career. Currently, students have numerous options when it comes to buying their books; the university bookstore, local bookstores, and online book dealers are a few of the most widely used sources. Many students opt for using all of these options in any given semester, with one of the most popular alternatives being that of purchasing books through other students; the only drawback is that it is not always easy to track down those students with the exact book one is looking for.

What university administrators get is a campus full of "book for sale" flyers, which is not only a bit less than appealing, but often times overlooked by many students. MyQuad has found a solution. One that could allow university administrators to bring their students that same exchange possibility without all hassle and the mess!

Book Xchange, MyQuad's latest web application tool for university administrators allows students to buy and sell textbooks from and to fellow students, all within the same site. Below are some of the exciting features that make up the Book Xchange application:
